simplicity and dignity which marked the liver of the fishermen of Galilee, but they are generally in a minority. If would indeed require a great stretch of the imagination to see this parson a la mode, going about the hills of Juden in ministering to the sick and consoling the afflicted, preaching in the midst of mobs and dying on the cross for the faith if necessary. Such a picture is a long way off, viewed from the interior of the church now in vogue. The privat, to be effective, aboutd no look upon life as a comedy, but as a great drama, in which he appears in the most eventful scopes -the birth, the marriage, the sickness of soul and body, and the douth—in all of which he is the spiritual teacher and consoler. The badinage of the drawing-room and the dinner table over the wine, and the chaff over the trivial platitudes of routipary existence are not for him. His acceptance of the sacred trust confided to him involves a complete renunciation of such pleasures, if they may be so onlied. When he lives up to this conception of his calling he ennobles it, and when he speaks from the pulpit, his words have a value which those of a hyacinbian parson can never have.

Up to the hour of going to press we have received news sufficient to enable us to give the following majoration, (official and unofficial) by countres.

Nelson, 2006 Macon, Monitrie, Piatt, Champaigu, Vermillion. Douglas, Clark, Coles,

In Edgar the contest as very close, and a late telegram from Tom Shoaff says that there will not be ten rotes between the candidates in that county. From present indications Nelson's reajority in the nine counties will not run below 1,500, and may reach 1,800.

Jupus Drummond made a remark Thursday at Indianapolis that had a lisvor in at pr bitter truth,, The case before the 'court was that of strikers who had interfered with a railroad in the hands of a recuver appointed by a Federal Court. A prisoner testified that after he knew that the road was under protection of the court he did what he could to return it to businessi Judge Drummond expressed his grati-Meation that such respect was manifest! ed. "It shows," he said "that for some purposes, we are at least a nation." The fear of penalties is justified by the so tion of the United States course which seldom swerve from their infliction 1 other railroads had been as sure that punishment would have followed interferonce, and it mobs had known that penaltine would as inevitably succeed their outrages, there would have been a happier condition of affairs to day, The difference in the administration lies principally in the fact that United States Judges do not depend upon votes for their positions; while other Judges bond to meet popular opinion as a matter of political, or of bread and butter policy. If "for some purposes we are, at least, a nation," the purposes are evolved through the administrations of men who are beyond the influence of any ignotic motive, and who insist that laws be respected because they beed an interest in retaining the favor of the people.

SOUND INSTRUCTION NEEDED.

(From the Indianapolis Journal.) It is safe to say that the fifteen strikers who on Friday received their sen tences in the United States court, never heard as much good sense or sound political economy uttered in the whole course of their lives as Judge Drummond compressed into his brief address. Doubtless they have attended sington as the site for the great exhipolitical meetings, some of one party and some of another, but it is hardly accounty to say that the average politioal speaker scarcely pretends to a knowledge of sound political economy, and never risks his popularity by telling his hearers unpleasant truths. They have probably attended another class of meetings viz those of trades unions and labor organizations. A venerable elder of the Reformed Prosbyterian church was traveling one day in one of the Forth and Clyde Canal boats in company with a number of soldiers, who shocked him much by their profaue awearing. Fearing that direct reproof would only lead to a ties, this state, from 1844 to '47, were repetition of the offence, he entered inte conversation with them, and, embracing a suitable opportunity, asked if any of them could tell him what sin that was, by being guilty of which mon excooded devils in wickedness. The question immediately arrested their attention, but none of them could answer him; and, after waiting a little, he explained that in awearing and calling upon God to destroy them, men exceeded devils in wickedness; for devils had pleaded with our Savier, in the days of his flesh, not to torment them before the time. Such was the effect produced by this mode of dealing that not an oath was sworn during the rest of the passage, and, at parting, the soldiers shook hands with the older, and thanked him for his well timed reproof.
